Educational Reform and Change in the Asia Pacific Region

Creating Reform in Training Principals to Change the Gear from Quantity to Quality in Education of Vietnam

Le Phuoc MINH

Vietnam has successfully in implementing the Educational Strategy from 2001 to 2010, in which the most recognition is the ratio of access increasing rapidly. It is, however, Vietnamese education currently face to the problem of low quality and inequity. There are many solutions proposed to solve the problem. Researchers and policy makers are agree that school principals shall play key roles on the trend of change the gear from quantity to quality in education. Thus, the Government has support to implement a special training program for all 30,000 school principals in Vietnam from 2007 to 2010. Since then, there is evident showed Vietnam education quality has been improved while remain high ratio of access .
