New Zealand

E. ross.notman@otago.ac.nz

Ross is Professor in Education at the University of Otago, New Zealand, and director of the Centre for Educational Leadership and Administration. He is the New Zealand project director of an international research study, across 20 countries, into the leadership practices of successful school principals, and the ISLDN study of leadership in high-needs schools and centres. Ross's major research interests focus on teacher and school principal development, particularly in the field of the personal dimensions of principalship. He becomes the Dean of the College of Education in April 2017.
