Pakorn Akkakanjanasupar, Ph.D., is a lecturer at the Division of Educational Administration, Department of Educational Policy, Management, and Leadership, Faculty of Education, Chulalongkorn University, Thailand. His areas of study encompass educational leadership, policy implementation, and institutional management, with a strong emphasis on the intersection of education, health, and social equity. With his postdoctoral fellowship in public health at the National University of Singapore and research training from the University of Toronto, he specializes in psychosocial dynamics, youth risk behaviors, HIV prevention, and health determinants, with a particular focus on key populations, especially LGBTQ+ youth.

Dr. Akkakanjanasupar's research interests extend to advanced research methodologies, social determinants of health and education, well-being, mental health wellness, diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging (DEIB), and policy development for marginalized communities. His work integrates social and theoretical frameworks to critically examine how educational systems, leadership models, and policy interventions contribute to institutional resilience and social equity. By employing rigorous qualitative and quantitative methodologies, he strives to bridge research and practice, fostering evidence-based policies and inclusive educational environments.
