Email: johanek@upenn.edu

Dr. Johanek is a Senior Fellow at the Graduate School of Education (GSE) at the University of Pennsylvania, where he previously served as Director of the Mid-Career Doctoral Program in Educational Leadership (2007-2024). He currently directs the Red Interamericana de Liderazgo Educational (RILE) and The Judgment Project. He is an affiliate faculty member of Perry World House, The Collegium Institute, and the Center for Latin American and Latinx Studies at Penn Arts and Sciences. He serves on the Steering Committee for Penn in Latin America and the Caribbean (PLAC). He is an International Visiting Professor at La Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile, and a Visiting Research Scholar/Adjunct Professor in the Center for History and Education, Edmund W. Gordon Institute for Advanced Study, Teachers College Columbia University. Current R&D interests focus on the identification and formation of situated judgment, including using digital simulations; the development of professional clinical infrastructure on a cross-national basis; and the history of public agency in recent U.S. school reform through a Chicago-based historical case study.
