Master of Arts in Global Histories of Education

2022/23

Programme Code
A1M106 (One-year Full-time)

Global Histories of Education

History of education is an exciting discipline that investigates the development of education over time. It thereby enables students to better understand the education systems of today. The Master of Arts in Global Histories of Education (MAGHE) is interdisciplinary and combines history, history of education and more present-focused international/comparative education. MAGHE takes up a global perspective with a special emphasis on East Asia.

Studying Histories of Education in Hong Kong

Hong Kong is the perfect place to study global histories of education. Its unique history has shaped the city's educational landscape. Being part of the Greater Bay Area, further high-performing education systems can be found in the immediate vicinity in Macao, Guangzhou and Shenzhen. In addition, Japan, South Korea, Vietnam and Singapore can be reached in just a few hours. The Education University of Hong Kong is located in a natural environment in the Tai Po area, only one hour away from the bustling city life of Kowloon and Hong Kong Island. The University is well connected to local institutions and can organise internship placements.

Career Prospects

The MAGHE programme broadens graduates professional profiles as educators or in related occupations. It also prepares for doctoral studies in education and/or history.

Programme Aims

The Master of Arts in Global Histories of Education (MAGHE) familiarises students with historical developments in education during the last two centuries in East Asia and beyond. It thereby provides a global perspective on key issues in the history of education. These include the implementation of national school systems, the growth of university education, the increasing role of international organisations (such as UNESCO and OECD), and the more recent rise of standardised testing and international rankings.

In short, the MAGHE programme enables students to:

- ◆ understand globalisation through the history of education;
- ◆ analyse historical developments in education worldwide;
- ◆ critically assess current education systems and imagine the future of education; and
- ◆ develop the ability to engage in educational reform and assist in leadership roles in educational contexts; or to succeed in further postgraduate research.

Programme Structure

The MAGHE programme consists of 24 credit points and will be offered in a one-year full-time mode. Students are required to take three core courses and five elective courses to complete the programme. Alternatively, two electives can be replaced by a research project. Students may take part in an optional internship or placement experience.

* Not all elective courses will be offered every year.

^ The elective is pending for approval.
