

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN WE RECEIVE YOUR PROPOSAL

- Your proposal will first be evaluated in-house by our commissioning editor(s). This may take up to a month.
- If we are satisfied that there is a market for the book, we will send it to 2-3 independent peer reviewers for evaluation. This normally takes about 3 months. We may also ask you to make changes to the proposal as suggested by our peer reviewers.
- If the book is given a favourable report, our in-house editor will prepare a formal publishing proposal (which includes projected costs and sales of the book) for approval by an editorial board. This may take up to a month.
- Once the manuscript is accepted by the board, the in-house editor will then contact you with a draft contract for further discussion
